ST. CLOUD, OSCEOLA COUNTY, FLORIDA THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1927

NUMBER FIFTY

COMMISSIONERS ASK BIDS ON KENANSVILLE ROAD

At a special meeting of the Board of County Commissioners, held in Kissimmee last Friday, the commissioners viewed maps of County Engineer J. E. Johnston, which showed a complete survey as well as estimates on highway routes No. 1 and No. 2 of the Kenansville-Fellsmore road. For route No. 1, the figure was $14,085, and for No. 2 it was $21,600.

After the matter had been thoroughly discussed, it was agreed in due time the board advertise for the bids in route No. 1. These bids will be received up until 10 a. m., Monday, August 21, 1927, on the whole or any part of the road. Specifications will be prepared by Engineer Johnston and left with the clerk to the Commissioners for bidders to inspect.

The question of purchasing a tractor was discussed and upon due motion and sanction the clerk was directed to advertise for bids on one ten-ton caterpillar tractor, and one ten-wheel grader with ten-foot blade, bids to received up to 10 a. m., Monday, August 15.

Judge Frank A. Smith addressed the commissioners on the importance of choosing the very best citizens of the county to serve as jurors.

ST. CLOUD NURSERY PROGRESSING ON BIG SCALE

The St. Cloud Ornamental Nursery at Seventeenth street and Wisconsin avenue gives promise of becoming one of the more important enterprises of its kind in the state.

The gardens or nursery were established only a few months ago by J. M. Parker, formerly mayor of St. Cloud, and already Mr. Parker has probably upward of 10,000 palms of various variety growing or being propagated. Aside from the palm varieties, Mr. Parker has started producing numerous other tropical shrubs and flowers, including the remarkable rose and the California date. He believes, from experiment, that the date will thrive in the temperate Florida soil.

Among the palm species in the large garden and propagation beds are varieties which are highly prized by those who favor palm trees in their yards, along driveways and streets and in park beautification.

The Hibiscus and Washingtonian beds are also large and the plants prolific and the manner in which all are growing is gratifying to Mr. Parker. They should attract the attention of the lovers of nature's finer gifts far and wide.

Mr. Parker says while it was only recently that he decided to enter the business on a big plan, his expectations have been fully realized in the progress of his plants, and that soon he proposes to undertake the roses likewise on a large scale.

The date has found a place also in the gardens of Mr. Parker and is growing very prolifically. Mr. Parker believes this tree, similar to the California date, will thrive in the proper soil and judging from the beautiful condition of the small trees growing he must be correct.

With the success already achieved by Mr. Parker and his assistants, it is reasonable to hope that by next winter the gardens will be a splendid show place, reflecting credit to the city as well as to the county and state.

EDWARD'S PHARMACY ENJOYING BIG BUSINESS

The sale being conducted at the Hecall Pharmacy, or what is better known to his wide host of friends and clients as Dr. Edwards drug store, is proving a crowning success.

The Tribune carried an advertisement last week announcing that the sale would begin August 1, and promptly at the announced time, customers began swarming into the store for their chosen articles. They had seen the stores' display in the newspaper and made up a list of just what was wanted. This made it more convenient for the clerks to handle the customer.

The call for goods at this reduced price was significant, leaving the impression that just as soon as new price levels are established on a firm basis in every line of trade and commerce, the people who have been holding too tightly the strings of their dough-bags will break away from such an ill-advised policy of economy and start the wheels of good times rolling again.

MR. AND MRS. DEMMON ENJOYING VACATION

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Demmon have just completed a very interesting tour of the north, beginning with the caves along the Shenandoah valley, the public buildings of interest in Washington and ending with the scenes and delights of the Green Mountains in Vermont.

A letter from Mr. Demmon says he finds people talking Florida and preparing to spend next winter in this state. The Demmons will spend six weeks now in Vermont, after which they will motor back to St. Cloud for the winter.

A. & P. STORE IS SHOWING INCREASE IN BUSINESS

A constant increase in the volume of business done since the Fourth of July at the A. & P. store, located next to the post office, is reported by T. H. Schlehler, manager of the St. Cloud branch of the chain.

The new manager has been on the alert since his arrival here on July 5 to take charge of the A. & P. store and he says he is finding a good demand for home-grown products among his customers.

For the foregoing reason Mr. Schlehler has made way for a good line of fresh vegetables and other products of the country, which accounts in part he believes for the stimulation of his business.

ST. CLOUD CHRISTIAN CHURCH TO BE REMODELED

At a meeting of the official board and members of the Christian church of St. Cloud held last week, plans for remodeling and enlarging the church so that the building will, when finished, seat 375 to 400 persons, were accepted. The work is scheduled to start within the next three or four weeks.

The Gothic idea of architecture will be employed throughout, so that when the church is completed it will be another of St. Cloud's striking places of worship.

A broad, colonial porch will be added the entire width of the church as you approach, while other additions will include ample class rooms. In the extensive and improvements to the rear of the building stained glass windows, of amber color, will be installed. Other additions will comprise a choir room and a room for the communion equipment.

Since the Rev. Dr. Taylor became pastor of the church two years ago, the membership has grown so steadily and firmly, it became evident a year ago that the enlargement and remodeling now agreed upon would be necessary at a near future day.

KISSIMMEE BANK IS PAYING OUT IN ADVANCE

The Bank of Osceola County, at Kissimmee, has paid out more than two thirds of series D certificates of deposit and on August 1 begins paying off the remaining ones in full, although this series is not due until August 15th.

The certificates bore four per cent interest and the payment thereof so far in advance of their maturity foreshadows the rapid return of sound conditions—not only in this section of the state, but as indicated by similar business barometers, in other parts, all over Florida.

DOCTOR DODDS NOT TO LEAVE FOR HIS VACATION

Dr. Wm. Dodds will forego his vacation this summer and maintain his regular office hours at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue in connection with his daily practice. Mrs. Dodds, however, has left for Coronado Beach, and anticipates spending the month at the Dodds beach cottage there.

DOLLAR SHOE SALE 10¢ ON AT THE TOGGERY

That school time is almost here and that the grown-ups are sizing about for their fall and winter shoes, the Dollar Sale of Wheat's Toggery as told in an advertisement on another page of this issue of the TRIBUNE will be interesting.

This store has been preparing for the sale for some time, and has a splendid stock from which to select when the sale opens Friday, August 5. It will continue until and including Monday, the 8th.

LEGION AUXILIARY ARRANGE SOCIAL AUGUST 15

The American Legion Auxiliary met Monday evening, August 1, in the Parker office, the meeting being opened by the president and a very interesting program was carried out.

After the reports of the various committees it was learned that one of our members, Mrs. Schatzman, had returned from her vacation in ill health. Mr. H. Riley's condition is improving.

After all unfinished business was transacted it was decided to entertain all auxiliary and American Legion members with a social at the City Park Monday evening, August 15. All members and those eligible are urged to come.

LEON D. LAMB

Prominent builder and developer who came to St. Cloud seventeen years ago, where he has built more homes than any other man. Mr. Lamb sees a great building area just ahead, and he will meet the demand. He is still building.

In order for a man to grow with a city he finds it necessary to keep pace with the march of time and consequently he must contribute a full measure of energy to that growth himself.

St. Cloud has enjoyed such steady rise in wealth, population, civic and municipal improvement during the past ten years that it is here fitting to begin acquainting Tribune readers more fully with some of those who contributed to the greater city of today—and Leon D. Lamb is chosen for the subject of this article. He has nothing to hide. His activities and services to the community in which he lives have been of such great benefit his friends may read on with just pride. Indeed, due to the modesty of the man, it would be necessary for one who knows him aside from Mr. Lamb, to tell the story.

When he came to St. Cloud 17 years ago, the city could be reached only by shabby dirt roads in any direction, and many of the handful of people then residing here lived in tents. There was a small, one-room school house in the new town and less than 20 pupils were enrolled. In fact, the town resembled the establishment of many a great western city which had birth upon the arrival of the covered wagon.

From the beginning of his residence here the young man took into consideration the strategic points in St. Cloud's location, its vast and rich back country and its magnificent lakes. He pictured the possibilities of great development, took off his coat, put on his boots and placed his shoulder to the wheel of progress. The results that followed stand out not only to his own credit at this writing but to the credit of the city and Mr. Lamb's fellow-citizens as well.

The need of homes, as he saw it 17 years ago, is as urgent today as it was in 1910, when he began his initial operations here. He has been building ever since, and at this time is preparing to launch two more beautiful homes, which he hopes to have finished before the end of the current year. One will be located on New York and the other on Florida avenues.

His most recent effort, after years of building for others,—and he has built more homes than any other man has ever built in St. Cloud—was the construction of one of the city's most striking residences, erected for himself and family. The decorators are now putting on the final touches to the residence and Mr. and Mrs. Lamb with their six children expect to occupy it within a couple of weeks. It is located on Florida avenue at Fourth street.

Mr. Lamb is still a young man, whose successful operations are mainly due to his sound method of building and a gifted foresight into business conditions. He buys the land and builds the house himself, so that when a purchaser is in the market for a home terms can be arranged to suit the prospects' pocket book.

GENERAL SURVEY INDICATES BETTER BUSINESS AHEAD

Business Men Visiting Throughout North Report Restoration of Confidence in Florida and Outlook For Large Crowds This Coming Winter Very Bright

That Florida is "coming back" and that this winter will go on record as one of the soundest seasons for the state is the consensus of opinion expressed far and wide. Nor is it the expression of those not in touch with the state of mind prevailing in practically all other parts of the country. It is the conclusion of men whose contact with conditions places them in position to know.

As shown by the statement of Governor Martin upon his return to Tallahassee this week, after attending the governors' convention in Michigan, the prophecy of markedly improved conditions just ahead is based upon a knowledge of the facts instead of a guess into the future.

The governor said that "judging from the interested inquiries I received, not only from the assembled governors but also from persons throughout the north and east, I would say that it seems to be the general consensus of opinion that the state will come back strong and that confidence in Florida is not lacking."

Further information in this respect is shed through the statement of City

Commissioner H. S. Dawley, who returned about a week ago from a visit to Indianapolis and Chicago, as well as to intermediate points. Mr. Dawley says unqualifiedly that he looks for a large crowd of people here this winter. "Where I went people are talking Florida on friendly terms, and many of those with whom I conversed said they were interested in buying here this winter. They said they realized that the bottom price had been reached in Florida and that those who buy this winter will do so to great advantage of the years immediately following."

Mr. Dawley brought out a factual point when he said that the people who came here last winter, and found remarkably cheaper rentals and hotel and restaurant rates than they had for years, went back home so pleased that it took but a little time for the news to spread. They are coming back this year with many others who were absent last year.

"If we will keep our feet on the ground when the tourists begin returning," said Mr. Dawley, "and not get prices too high, showing that we (Continued on Page Four)

BLACKSHEAR BUYS INTEREST IN ST. CLOUD

With the announcement that George W. Persons had assumed active management of the parent store in Kissimmee it was learned that H. W. Blackshear, for the past 18 months manager of the Kissimmee branch, had purchased a half interest in the St. Cloud store. He took charge here this week.

Mr. Blackshear made a host of friends while in Kissimmee and each of these wishes him success in St. Cloud. He has had a broad experience in the mercantile business and the people of St. Cloud will welcome him. He is a devout believer in advertising, to which he attributes much of his business success.

HILLEBRANDTS HOME AFTER EXTENDED WESTERN TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Hillebrandt returned to St. Cloud on Wednesday of last week from an extended trip through the north. On the way up they stopped at Asheville, N. C., for a taste of mountain air, and thence on to Illinois where they visited with relatives.

The couple drove out to St. Louis and Kansas City for a few days' visit with friends and relatives. Mr. Hillebrandt having spent several years in that section of the midwest before coming to Florida.

On their return they came by way of Urbana, Ill. and Indianapolis, Ind., which put them on the Lincoln highway and over which they motored to Washington, D. C. Some time was spent in the national capital sight-seeing.

Mr. and Mrs. Hillebrandt report good roads and fine weather over the entire trip except from Augusta to Waycross in Georgia, where very heavy rains had made the going bad. This however they said served to make Florida look all the better when they finally arrived home.

COLLINS ARRIVES AT ST. JOHNS, MICH.—ALL WELL

John Collins, city clerk and collector, who left here a couple of weeks ago on his vacation has arrived at St. Johns, Mich., his destination, after a rather tiresome trip by automobile. In a telegram addressed to City Manager Mitchell, which was received by Mr. Mitchell this morning, Mr. Collins says he was often stuck in six inches of mud, but did not tell in what state the muddy roads were.

Mr. Collins reported all well and that he was delighted with the cool weather he is enjoying in St. Johns.

MRS. HIBBARD SPEAKS AT W. C. T. U. FRIDAY

Announcement is made that Mrs. H. E. Hibbard, who has recently returned from the mission field in China, will speak at the W. C. T. U. meeting Friday afternoon at the W. C. T. U. Temple on Eleventh street. Mrs. Hibbard will take for her subject, "Women and Children."

Mothers and children are invited to be present at which time there will be a nurse present to examine the children.

FORMER PUBLISHER IS VISITING UNCLE IN ST. CLOUD

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wilkes, of Orlando, are spending an indefinite visit to their uncle, Pascal Strode, who has been in ill health for several weeks. Mr. Strode has been a resident of St. Cloud for twelve years and has a home on Michigan avenue.

Before coming to Florida Mr. Wilkes was publisher of a weekly newspaper at Chadbourn, N. C. He says that the North state is enjoying splendid business conditions in every section. In the western portion of the state, real estate is very active, while in the eastern portion, where tobacco and truck farming is the principal industry, the excellent crops of last year brought good prices. The truck products, with Chadbourn strawberries leading, brought good prices this year. The present season's tobacco crop is also holding out promise of splendid returns to the growers.

ST. CLOUD POLICE RECOVER STOLEN FORD SEDAN

When a Ford sedan had been parked from into evening until early morning near the garage of Chrys Rummel, on East Tenth street last Friday night, patrolman Fowler conceived the idea that it might be stolen property, placed the machine in Rummel's garage and reported his find to Chief of Police Dunham. Upon Mr. Dunham's investigation he found letters inside car addressed to F. H. Scott, Orlando, which lead him to communicate with the Orlando police department. By Scott told the Orlando police he had lost a car bearing the above description by the St. Cloud police, as given by the St. Cloud police, a of the Scott's arrival here he described the sedan sufficiently to convince a good Cloud force that he was the owner in original license plates. Yet have Due to the method employed, he has thieves however of destroy in this license plates and supplying a quite stand a differently numbered. He will be considered of no matter the value with respect to the do not as to the machine. No clues have been available to whom the theft might be committed by.

MARKED INCREASE IN INQUIRIES AT C. OF C.

A marked increase during the past two weeks in the number of inquiries from people in the north who are seeking homes to rent or buy in St. Cloud was reported at the Chamber of Commerce after the noon-day luncheon Wednesday; and judging from the nature of these inquiries the statewide prediction that the highways, railroads and steamships running to Florida this winter will be heavily taxed with travel bids fair to become a reality.

A goodly attendance was noted at the meeting, although many members are out of the city, either on vacations or business trips having to do with the purchase of stock for winter trade. In the absence of both President Trickett and Vice President Foster, A. L. Bayne presided.

The Florida Telephone Corporation made application for membership and were voted members of the body.

John A. Bailey stated that it was his belief that the employment of three meters here with as many different rates was cumbersome and expensive means of measuring current. He entered a plea for one meter and a downward scale of charge per kilowatt hour, based upon the amount used above the minimum. He said Orlando was operating under this system and that it worked to the satisfaction of both city and consumer. Instead of running wires of varying capacity for the convenience of power, Orlando uses a 220 wire which will carry a sufficient current for any domestic use, whether it be lighting, heating or cooling. Mr. Bailey asked that the Chamber of Commerce look into the question, and a resolution introduced by him to this end was carried.

FLOOR FINISHER CANTRELL IS HERE

One of the finer jobs in floor finishing in St. Cloud is being completed at the new home of Leon D. Lamb on Fourth and Florida avenue by J. W. Cantrell.

While Mr. Cantrell is here, as announced in an advertisement in this issue, he would be glad to hear from any other parties desiring first class work on their floors.

HUNTER, president of the Citizens State Bank and builder of the Hunter Arms and developer of Galson Gardens, who has been spending some time in Gallon, Ohio, is expected home on the 15th of August to resume active business operation and push the development of his holdings in St. Cloud. HOFFMAN TAKES CHARGE OF KISSIMMEE THEATRE

The first step toward making the Kissimmee theatre more attractive and pleasant for patrons was taken by Mr. Hoffman upon his arrival there when he began re-vamping and re-decorating the interior of the building. The work is nearing completion.

Civil War Veteran and Retired Farmer Is Prominent Resident of St. Cloud

HON. WM. HALL
Veteran of St. Cloud, Florida

the subject of this sketch, photograph appears above, was born in Scotland; came to the United States in 1854, locating in Cromwell, where they remained until 1858 when they moved to Sterling in Minnesota, the great Pr. country. In this section he remained on a farm until 1860 when the famous Sioux Epou occurred only a few miles from his home. At the age of 18 he joined other members of the made sex in that section, carried a gun all day to be ready for any invasion that might occur. It was in February 1865 that Mr. Hall was mustered into the U. S. army, but being soon afterward stricken with measles never was sent south, the war ending soon after his enlistment. He was mustered out in June, 1865.

Spending his time on the farm from 1865 to 1870, Mr. Hall went to the Business school at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for one year. When the Gas Works Manufacturing Co. the firm he was connected with after leaving school, lost their business on "Time Monday". In April 1873, Mr. Hall went to Mankato, Minn., and entered the service of the McCormick Harvesting Machinery Co. In 1879 Mr. Hall was elected to the legislature for two sessions.

In 1882 Mr. Hall was appointed customs inspector at St. Vincent and in 1884 went to the American Express Co. as agent at Winnipeg. He remained at this post until 1904, where he was made vice and deputy counsel for the United States. In 1905 he returned to the old farm home, where remained until moving to St. Cloud in 1911. He purchased a home in Dooy's addition to St. Cloud and a small farm to the south of the city. During his active career he has been a successful farmer, bank director, secretary of the Masons and Eastern Star lodges, director in the G. A. R. Association, and generally interested in all movements for the building of a real city in his new location.

One of the finest art exhibits in the state is that of Mr. Hall, the work of his wife, while they were located in Winnipeg.

VETERANS ENJOY AN ENTERTAINING PROGRAM

Once more the Veterans and their friends met at the G. A. R. Hall, July 23, to take part and listen to a splendid program given by the Daughters of Union Veterans.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Comrade Lathrop, followed by the singing of "America"; prayer by Comrade Cooley after which the reading of the minutes of the last meeting was heard and the same were approved.

The Florida song and St. Cloud cheer followed. Then the "singing of the Hall" piano was brought before the meeting and was referred to the trustees of the G. A. R. Hall. A collection was taken.

All were glad to see Vice-President Comrade Campbell at the meeting after a severe and long illness.

After the business features of the meeting were concluded the social hour was turned over to the program committee, headed by Mrs. Irene Smith. The program follows:

Reading, Mrs. Bateson, "Only What She Heard"; musical, Miss William Lyman, "In the Great Way" with Mrs. Lyman at the piano. Great applause followed their renditions; solo, "Fly Forth, O Gentle Dove", Mrs. Nettie Clark; reading, Margaret Dalley, Children's hour, music, Comrade and Mrs. Raymond; violin and saxophone, Mrs. Nettie Clark; piano, two selections; reading, Mrs. Elenora Clark, "Ghosts"; reading, Mr. McKay, "Mr. Middleton's cure for rheumatism"; music, violin and piano, Miss Pearl Orr and Miss Brunning; reading by President Lathrop, "A bear story as told by a little boy"; colloquy, Allen and Besse Price, Feeding a tramp.

The meeting closed with the flag salute and singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

There being five Saturdays in this month, the president appointed Comrade Perkins to have charge of the social hour at the next meeting which insures a good program.

Josephine Perkins, Sec.

Dr. J. D. Chunn is having an extension constructed to the two sleeping porches on the rear of his striking residence just east of the city limits, and will also build a concrete driveway to the garage. Dr. Chunn's office is located on Pennsylvania avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh streets.

G. A. R. AND FRIENDS ENJOY PROGRAM AT HALL

The Veterans Association was called to order by the president, Comrade Lathrop, with the singing of "America"; prayer by E. M. Bennett. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved, followed by the Florida song and the St. Cloud yell, and the collection.

No announcements being in the program, the social hour was then turned over to Comrade Perkins, who gave the following program:

Drum Corps, Comrades Raymond, Goff and Mr. Samuel Hour, two selections.

Again we listened to the drum corps, two selections, sung by Mrs. Quinn. Talk on Chinese by Reverend E. R. Hubbard.

We are always glad to hear Mr. Hubbard tell of his work in the mission field of China. Comrade Campbell made the motion that the Association give Comrade Perkins a rising vote of thanks for his splendid program, which was carried unanimously.

Mrs. Livermore announced that the W. R. C. would serve ice cream and cake on the lawn at the G. A. R. hall next Saturday, August 6. The meeting was closed by singing the national anthem. The next meeting was announced for one week from date, and the social hour will be conducted by the G. A. R. All are cordially invited. Josephine Perkins, Secretary.

REGULAR MEETING OF RED CROSS ON THURSDAY

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTES

The pastor, Rev. H. N. Campbell, will be out of town on his vacation during the month of August. There will be no Sunday church service except Sunday school at the regular hour, 9:30 a. m.

The members of the church are mourning the loss of two of their most esteemed members, Rev. Elias B. Cooke and Jonathan H. Fuller, who were laid to rest during the past week. Their places will long seem vacant in our midst, as they were in regular attendance at the church services whenever health would permit.

Dempsey's Fox Mind

Leo "Pizen" Flynn, (the Silver Fox) chief trainer and advisor of Jack Dempsey in his 7 round knock-out of Jack Sharkey, now tells how Sharkey was boxed into slugging—and his "Waterloo."

SILVER FOX FLYNN STAGED SHARKEY KNOCK-OUT

NEW YORK.—They call him "The Silver Fox." He was christened Leo Peter Flynn. The sports fraternity takes liberties and call him Leo "Pizen" Flynn.

The difference between the Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia and the Jack Dempsey at New York last week—was Leo "Pizen" Flynn—the Silver Fox—who, as Dempsey's manager and chief advisor, did a bit of clever boxing and was one big factor in helping bring victory over Sharkey to the former champion.

The aftermath of the Dempsey-Sharkey battle found conversation centered almost chiefly in discussion of whether or not Dempsey had fouled Sharkey in the knock-out mixup in the seventh round. Now that sober analysis of the battle has been made virtually all unbiased and fair judges agree that Dempsey's victory was clean-cut and that the better man won by following a carefully planned battle and leading the trailing sailor on to his Waterloo.

And Silver Flynn had a big hand in this. Discussing the highlights of the battle, both before and after, Flynn disclosed to the writer the details of a box which was just across on the New York gamblers—and which incidentally led on until even the Sharkey camp fell for it.

Some Inside Information
A few days before the fight Flynn learned that the New York gambling clique which cleaned up on Tommy at Philadelphia—was out with a pool of $50,000 to bet on the Dempsey-Sharkey match.

"I heard the boys were sending an agent to Saratoga to look over Dempsey," said the Silver Fox. "They had agreed to be governed by his decision. They picked a good man—one of the best boxers that ever lived. He approached me at the camp—for my confidential opinion."

"I gave it to him. I told him I was doing as well as I could considering that Dempsey was an old guy. I was down-hearted. I did everything but cry. Finally—I was forced to tell him that in my opinion Dempsey would have to win within five rounds—or 'good night'."

"Well—it worked. They went back. Up and snicker on Sharkey. Best of all, however, they let Sharkey in on the 'inside' info—and Sharkey too fell for it. Really—all Sharkey's loud talk was based on the fact that he thought he was going into the ring to meet a wheezy old gent. And ya gods—he was meeting a fighter every bit as strong as he was and with dynamite in both hands."

Dempsey Patted Patches
"Now here is something that should be of much interest to some of the alleged experts—who even yet are trying to make their audiences believe that it was all Sharkey up to the knockout by Dempsey."

Up to the time that Dempsey landed that right and left in the seventh round he was pulling his punches. I will say for Jack Dempsey that despite everything that happened in earlier rounds, he followed the pre-arranged battle plans to the letter. He is one grand soldier and fighter."

"The idea was to encourage Sharkey in the belief that he could afford to trade wallop with Dempsey. And did it work—now I ask you?"

"Dempsey told me at the end of the fifth round that he felt Sharkey going. He was convinced then that victory was his and he whispered to me—I've got him. He's ready to go. I hope he don't take a dive. I want to knock him out."

"Here's another point. Look back at Dempsey's last statement to the press at weighing-in time. He said he would win with two punches. Well—he did. It was the right to the solar plexus and left to the chin in the seventh round. Jack didn't say WHEN he would shut across those two blocks. But he knew and I knew—and there they are."

"And they were the only two real punches he let go in the whole fight."

"Can Jack Dempsey sock?"

"At the end of the first round Sharkey told his handlers, 'Why, Dempsey can't break an egg.'"

"Maybe not. Maybe so—but down deep in Jack Sharkey's heart he now knows what real punching is—and from the receiving end."

HAVE ANOTHER DISH!

The estimated production of ice cream in the United States during 1936 was only 35,450,000 gallons, but for 1937 it was 324,655,000 gallons, an increase in 10 years of 240 per cent. The industry employs more than 50,000 persons and pays out in salaries more than $75,000,000 a year.

An Anonymous Letter

We don't believe in anonymous communications ordinarily, but we are going to print this letter for the benefit of its writer and other girls. We suggest that it be clipped and mailed to all erring boy friends, for we know there are some things that can be answered better by other girls for their boy friends than by us. This letter, incidentally, might be considered a supplement to our article in answer to C. C.'s inquiry, "How to Win a Girl." And we think the boys will appreciate it, for while present-day males are undoubtedly badly spoiled, we don't believe there is one with a heart so dead that he never to himself hath said, "Gee, I want to be a popular with women. How can I be a knockout?"

Here is the answer.

I know any number of nice boy friends who seem to be trying to win me in the manner C. C. considers most effective—that is, by being indifferent, so I know where of I speak when I assure him that indifference will never get any man very far with an intelligent girl.

Every girl and woman living longs for attention—no she ever so sophisticated, and, of course, they all want to be flattered and to be made love to.

But mere necking, petting, and general cooing means will soon wear out the intelligent girl's interest in a man.

There are many other ways of making love. Empty flattery doesn't go with all girls. It helps, of course, but being a mere shock will not satisfy the girl who has a brain beneath her boyish look. Money? Well, it helps, to be sure, but we all know girls who pass up the boy with the cash to step out gayly in the movies (or remain at home) with the poor but winsome boy who presents his single rose with flattering tenderness.

Boys, take it from one who knows—you can all knockouts with the ladies if you will only follow the most elementary rules of courtship. It's so simple to deal with women. All they ask are the things any man can learn to give.

Attention—that's what gets them, indifference—never!

And the attentions need not be costly ones, either. There are any number of girls who would prefer sitting in the parlor all evening with a candle of sweet peas than to step out to the most expensive exhaust in town. I personally am paying that I will receive one bouquet of flowers or one nice box of candy before I get too old to enjoy it. You'll be surprised at what a few flowers will accomplish. Or a book or two of the sort everybody's reading. Or perhaps an occasional "surprise" note. A birthday present (inexpensive book-ends, shoe buckles, subscription to a magazine, an artificial flower with the right note, a flask of perfume, etc.) for which you need spend no more than $2.00 to $5.00—and my, what a whole of a return you'll get!

A woman's need for consideration, thoughtfulness and tenderness is insatiable. Show an intelligent admiration for a girl and even though you are the most common-place man in the world, she will immediately discover in you innumerable good qualities. She will overlook your awkwardness, your lack of originality, your imperfect nose and the flatness of your arches.

Makes love to her right and she is yours forever—but assume a pose of indifference and you are lost forever. MABEL.

On How to Win a Girl

What I would like to know is this—do girls like men who pay a great deal of attention to them—or do they prefer men who seem rather indifferent? My system is to let them do the fussing, but some of my friends tell me that I'll never get anywhere that way.

C. C.

Unquestionably, there are some girls upon whom indifference acts as a spur to conquer and bring to their feet new worshippers, but I don't believe these girls are in the majority. Girls today do not place undue value on the admiration of every man, and they are too engrossed in the business of living to waste a great deal of effort on any one man.

When woman had more time to play—they expected and demanded attention, admiration, and pursuit from all men of their acquaintance, and if one man displayed indifference, the girl's vanity was hurt; her business was to teach him that he was not so humane to her feminine charms as he thought. An amusing pastime!

But girls of today have a broader range of interests. Not that they do not yet demand attention, admiration, and pursuit of men—they still expect men to fetch and carry for them—and like it, but if they don't—well, what is one scalp more or less! There are so many other interesting and amusing things in life!

Their mother expect men to accept them on their own terms, so to speak, and most men have been willing to respond to this franker and healthier understanding of friendship between the sexes.

There might come a time in the affairs of a courtship when indifference on the part of the man toward an incorrigible girl might be an effective threat that she would lose him if she didn't behave. But in starting out to conquer, I wouldn't recommend indifference as an incentive to a girl's interest. Your modern rule is a bit too honest, herself, to be intrigued by subtle methods.

Perhaps the best working principle at the moment is one that might be placed under the heading of consideration—that is, treating the girl as a human being, respecting her for her intelligence, ability, good qualities, and thereby winning her respect for yours; developing common interests until you grow so close together that you find life would be dull without her.

Of course, everything depends upon the girl's individual personality. A man who gets there most quickly studies the girl and applies his knowledge deftly. After all, it is impossible to suggest a line of conduct for winning a girl without knowing anything about her.

Catalogue her. Find out to what type she belongs and adopt your tactics to the situation, for all women do not rise to the same line of courtship. There are some feminine hearts that can be taken only by assault and battery, and others that surrender to patient siege. There are women whose love is for sale to the highest bidder, and others bestow it in pity.

So there you are, and your success will depend upon your ability to psycho-analyze the particular woman and upon the skill with which you suggest to her that you are the great unsatisfied need of her soul.

But when the right girl comes along, you'll forget all about "system"—and set out to win her according to the dictates of your heart.

The mother of Hume, the historian, considered him weak minded as a youth.

DAVID SPARES SAUL

Lesson Text—1 Samuel 26

David was confronted with some most subtle temptations. With the people's sympathy on his side, and with unusual opportunities twice thrown across his path to put Saul out of the way, he steadfastly resisted, choosing to wait God's time and win his victory in the right way.

David, like all men, had his weaknesses, but we should not fail to set over against them the strong traits of character brought so clearly to light in this whole period of providential discipline while awaiting God's hour for him to assume the kingship. Fidelity to Saul, the king in power, and obedience to God, were active virtues which controlled David at all times.

The Ziphites, evidently seeking the favor of Saul, "squealed on" David. These some people are ever trying to get a "pull" for themselves by giving some man over to his enemy. Saul's heart was full of tender. It only needed a spark from hell. The hint from the Ziphites set him off and he went into the wilderness in pursuit of David (vs. 1-5).

The inconsistency and falseness of some men is almost inconceivable. Just shortly before, Saul had been indebted to David for his life, had admitted his error and made David swear he would be kind to his posterity. Here he is again openly declaring himself an enemy and seeking his life. That is about as much as the friendship of some people is worth.

Such turns of events are hard tests of Christian men. David stood the test. He did not lose heart but kept looking to God to guide him. He would not consent that the wrong of Saul should make him wrong also. Let us remember that such reverses of friendship afford us the opportunity of showing the invisible truth of our characters and glorifying God by revealing a real superiority over the man of the world.

David saw Saul approaching (v. 3). He had a foe and knew it. We may consider ourselves half defeated when we try to reason the facts of Satan and sin out of existence. It is only when we are fully aware of the nature of the forces that are against us that we "put on the whole armor of God."

Saul and his men pitched camp and, having nothing to fear, decided to take a little rest. They were soon snoring. David chose Abishai to go down to the camp with him and look things over (v. 6). By night the snoring of the soldiers assured them that it was a good time to approach. There lay Saul in the midst, with his mouth open, snoring away, and beside him, his trusty spear stuck into the ground (v. 7). This is said to have been a custom of indenting the location of a leader when a party of soldiers halted for rest.

What an opportunity to pin him to the ground! It was Abishai's brilliant idea. Such a chance, in his mind, must be God-given. "We can make quick work of it," said Abishai. "I will not smite him a second time" (v. 8). How easy it is, when we do not pause to get the mind of Christ, to make ourselves believe that a most subtle temptation is a God-given opportunity. But David had evidently been walking in fellowship with his God, a circumstance which gave him an altogether different outlook upon the situation. We may well be thankful that the presence of such men in the church has often saved us from making radical mistakes in the name of the Lord.

"The Lord will do the smiting," said David, "for his day shall come to die. We cannot safely stretch forth our hands against the Lord's anointed" (vs. 9-10). The discipline of David's spirit at such a time is certainly admirable. A devout Christian living in this age of grace could not have done better. The purpose of God in all David's trials, to fit him first to govern himself, was beautifully fulfilled. If we have not well learned the lesson of self-government, we will never be fit to restrain a lot of ardent and impetuous followers.

Let us learn from David, never to strike an ardent enemy, nor to suffer another to strike him. Let us learn also that we can safely put our case in God's hands and act at all times in utter contempt of all that is personally and selfish, so long as we have real reverence for what is sacred and divine. If we are God-appointed, we may be certain God will see to it that we get our place without the employment of any questionable means.

Quietly David took the spear and the cruse of water from Saul's holster (v. 12). These were the very emblems of Saul's kingship and power. These were carried off for a proof of the fidelity of the bearer. How inevitable the loyalty of this honest heart. He had spared Saul in the cave; again he had slipped up and cut away the lap of his master's garment; now he carries away the spear which might have taken his own life.

What a strange sensation must have run through Saul's camp as the voice of David rang out from the top of a nearby hill, the cutting taunt: "Abner, art thou not a valiant man? Wherefore then hast thou not kept thy lord, the king? Now see where the king's spear is and the cruse of water that was at his holster" (vs. 15-16). Thompson tells us there are hundreds of ravines in those hills where this whole scene could be enacted, every word heard and yet the speaker be quite beyond the reach of his enemies. David knew he was perfectly safe.

Saul knew the voice (v. 17) and may we in modern times, "He felt like two cents!" Again comes David's voice beseeching Saul to give up the madness of his passion, repent and reconcile God with sacrifice and offering (v. 19). Furthermore he let Saul know that his character was to God's keeping and that a great day of unclouding was coming when his righteousness in these matters would stand clearly in the light.

"The king of Israel is come out to seek a flea" (v. 20). A flea skips about and is of little value if caught. How ridiculous Saul was making himself! Much of the animosity between men is about as foolish.

Saul was evidently convicted that his military arrangements had been most unsoldierlike. "I have played the fool," he admitted, "and have erred exceedingly" (v. 21). It was well said, but it did not go far enough. He kept right on playing the fool. It has been said that "some men are born fools, but the majority become so from practice."

We read nothing of any tears of repentance. There is a ring of vexation rather than contrition. So again and again superficial repentance has led to relapse and deterioration. More motion fades away. Temptation comes again, as the Ziphites came again to Saul and induced him to resume what he had renounced. True repentance means a heart really broken for sin, and then broken from sin. Much recalled potential crying is only hypocritical lying.

Pith and Point

He who does not believe in an adversary is pretty sure to be caught (v. 3).

God gives our enemies into our hands that we may sure them, not destroy them.

Questionable means can have no part in the carrying out of God's will (v. 8).

The best victory is won by heaping coals of fire upon an enemy's head. (Give him a burning sense of shame by a deed of love.)

He who is truly repentant will be sorry enough for sin to quit it (v. 21). He who leaves God out of his plans, must some day confess that he has played the fool!

The man who is led of God can easily weaken the strongest and baffle the wisest enemy.

Suggestive Questions

Is it well that a Christian should be aware of the fact that he has deadly enemies? (v. 3; Cp. Eph. 6:12-13).

Why were Saul and his men sleeping so soundly? (v. 7; Cp. v. 12).

What still happens to those who keep up an habitual spirit of enmity to God? (Rom. 11:8).

Who was back of Abishai's suggestion that the opportunity to kill Saul was a God-given opportunity? (v. 8; Cp. 2 Cor. 11:15).

Who are at present included in "the Lord's anointed"? (v. 9; Cp. 1 Jn. 2:20, 27 R. V.).

How many times did David keep Abishai from taking life? (2 Samuel 16: 9, 10; 19:21-22).

When is the confession of sin of no avail? (v. 21; Cp. Prov. 28:13).

Why was David so gloriously exalted in due time? (1 S. 14:11).

"He not overcome of evil but overcome evil with good." (Rom. 12:21)

It was said of W. E. Gladstone, the great English statesman, that if one wanted to make him do acts of gracious friendliness, it was only necessary to try to do him an injury. He believed in fighting with opposites: fire with water; a bad spirit with a good spirit; disease with health; unkindness with kindness.

Jeanyus has said: "To be kind to the kind is civility; to be unkind to the unkind is beastliness; to be unkind to the kind is Satanism; to be kind to the unkind is Christianity."

The Presbyterian representation is third, eighty-five Presbyterians being among the number.

The complete summary is as follows:

FLORIDA SPENDS $5,000,000
FOR UNIT IN HIGHWAY

TALLAHASSEE — Twenty-one million dollars is to be spent this year on the old Spanish trail, and Florida, alone, is completing a unit of the route entailing an expenditure of $5,000,000, according to information received at Pensacola.

The Florida unit, comprising hard-surfacing from Jacksonville to Tallahassee, and which is expected to be finished about Labor Day, is the largest single one of the entire trail.

The completed construction, old and new, will represent an expenditure of $20,000,000.

Forty-two per cent of the mileage for the trail from San Antonio to St. Augustine is paved. The projects financed and officially authorized indicate completion of paving between those two cities, and other major improvements from the north southward to the trail insure paved trunk lines for the entire old Spanish trail and connections with the north.

INFANT DEATHS ARE ON THE DECREASE
IN FLORIDA

Encouraging statistics showing a decrease in infant mortality in Florida are contained in an article by Stewart G. Thompson, director of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics, appearing in the current issue of the official publication of the Florida State Board of Health.

Though comparing favorably with other states in a low death rate, Florida should do much more to further decrease the percentage, the writer says.

His statistics show that of every 1,000 babies born in this state, seventy-five die before they are a year old. For white infants the rate is 62 per 1,000, which is not so far above the rate of 51.6 for Oregon, which, according to statistics recently published by the United States bureau of census, has the lowest rate.

Remarkable Record Made

Florida, too, shows a remarkable record in the decrease of infant deaths since 1917, when first statistics for the state were compiled.

Concerning this, Mr. Thompson writes: "Those who are working diligently to reduce the rate in Florida, look with pride on the record for the past ten years. In 1917 the infant mortality rate was 106; for the white population, 97; for colored, 155. The rate is now lower than in 1917. However, it is higher than for 1925. The white race fluctuated between 86 and 65 from 1921 to 1925, inclusive, going up to 79 in 1924 and dropping to 61 in 1925. The lowest infant mortality rate ever reported for this state."

During 1925, a total of 34,721 births were recorded, the highest for the state. During the year, 2,014 babies under one year of age died.

Premature births were regarded responsible for 604 of these deaths. Diarrhea and enteritis caused 563 more babies to die, while injury at birth claimed 128. Other causes of infant death were: influenza, 75; syphilis, 52; whopping cough, 32; convulsions, 37.

Only Six States Lower

Only six states have a lower infant mortality rate than Florida for white population. These are: California, 62.7; Iowa, 59.4; Minnesota, 57.4; Nebraska, 57.8; Oregon, 51.6 and Washington, 50.2. Colored population included, fourteen states have lower rates than Florida.

With the healthful climate and sunshine so abundant here, Mr. Thompson, in his article, expresses a hope that Florida can and will lead all other states in a low rate within the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shivers, who have been stepping at the St. Cloud hotel for several months, departed during the week for Vero. Mr. Shivers, who is engaged in highway construction, will be located at Vero for an indefinite period.

NEXT WINTER MAY OUT-RIVAL ALL
PREVIOUS ONES

With the state road department letting new contracts for new bridges and roads as fast as the unprecedented program of the past two years is being carried out, those who are in touch with the tourist business in the north, as well as visitors to and from many of the larger cities beyond Florida, predict a banner winter season here for 1937-38.

Good hotels and apartment houses have been erected all over the state, with good roads and intelligent road-makers leading to all of them. For this reason tourists, as well as Florida residents who take quite a whirl themselves at touring their own state, will find conditions more favorable than ever before, since they will not be compelled to remain at one place but can travel to every part of the state in their own automobiles or on less lines or railroads.

Furthermore, the reports of more uniform and reasonable hotel and apartment house rates which have been inaugurated all over Florida during the past 15 months have permeated very broadly through the country.

The almost incalculable number of buildings which have been erected in Florida during the years 1925-37 now contribute effectively to the best sort of accommodations and guarantee continued reasonable rates next season.

Summer Tourists Enjoying Florida

Summer tourists who have taken advantage of the cheap rates to visit Florida are having a fine time at the various beaches and aside from enjoying the cooling breezes are finding Florida fishing very much to their liking. Those who have chosen interior points are in love with the orange groves and clear water lakes and running streams and with plenty of fruits and vegetables they are finding plenty to eat while they are spending their vacation in a state where the average man thinks of spending his time in the winter. Summer tourists become all year round residents of Florida by a large majority for they are real home-seekers.

USED IN SUMMER WHITE HOUSE

Mr. V. M. Hill, whose advertisement describing the Kohler Automatic Electric Plants appears in another part of this paper, has informed us that two K. W. Kohler Automatic Plants are being used to supply electric light and power in the State Game Lodge in the Black Hills of South Dakota, where President and Mrs. Coolidge are spending their vacation.

These two plants supply electricity for the main lodge, which has 32 rooms and also for other buildings, 35 of them in all. Among these are the homes for the Superintendent of the Park, and the game keeper; the Governor's cottage and the cottage occupied by Senator Norbeck; Garage; stables; mess hall; filling station; public camp; and various out-buildings.

Also Using Two Farm-size Plants

In addition to these two 5 K. W. Kohler Electric Plants, two of the 1500 watt, popularly known as Model D, have been installed to supply electricity.

SADLER JONATHAN R. FULLER

Sadler Jonathan R. Fuller, son of Ellen Gemmett Chastain and Jonathan Fuller was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., being one of three children. In pioneer days he developed a sturdy spirit that fitted him for the hardships and privations of later life.

He gladly answered the call of his country, enlisting January 11, 1894, being only a little past 17. He joined General Custer's famous Red Neck Brigade in the Fifth Michigan cavalry, being later transferred to the First. Being messenger carrier and scout, he had many thrilling and dangerous experiences of which he never tired telling and re-telling to his children and which he lived and relived with his comrades.

In 1895 he went to the plains to fight Indians and was discharged in Salt Lake City, March 10, 1896, reaching home three months later on the day he was 20 years old.

He was married on June 8, 1892, to Susannah McQuarrie at Algona, Mich. These two in their turn took up pioneer life and soon moved to North Dakota. Fourteen years later they moved farther west, going to Washington, thence to Idaho, wishing to escape the northern cold. Mr. Fuller moved with his family to Arizona, then to Arkansas and Oklahoma, but in March of 1921 he heeded the call of the old soldier colony and came to St. Cloud, where he laid his wife to rest October 14, 1922.

On October 6, 1925, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Clara F. Rhoads, who survives him, together with five sons and three daughters and 19 grand-children, of whom only his youngest, Mrs. P. H. Hall is present. He departed this life at daybreak Tuesday morning, July 26, 1937.

ricity in buildings located quite a long distance from the main lodge.

Thousands of these 1500 watt plants are in use on farms throughout the United States. They are of a size which will supply plenty of electric light and which also furnish power with which to drive milking machines, water systems, cream separators, washing machines, electric irons, and many other labor-saving devices and electric household appliances.

No Large Storage Batteries

All Kohler Automatic Electric Plants are equipped with the patented Kohler Automatic switch, which makes large sets of storage batteries unnecessary. Only a small starting battery is used. They generate 110 volt current, the same voltage as is supplied in city homes.

Kohler plants were first placed on the market about seven years ago and have established an enviable record for dependable and economical service. They are manufactured by the Kohler Co., of Kohler, Wisconsin, who are known throughout the world by their trade name, "KOHLER OF KOHLER." This company was established in 1873 and is one of the leading manufacturers of plumbing fixtures as well as Electric Plants.

Mr. Hill says that what's good enough for President Coolidge is certainly good enough for the people in this vicinity who do not as yet have electricity in their homes. He has been busy calling on people in this country and already has made quite a number of installations. He will be pleased to explain the services of the Kohler Plants to all who do not as yet have electric service available.

Mr. Lamb has never failed St. Cloud when it was within his reach to foot the bill for any needed civic or even municipal improvement. This statement is exemplified in the fact that he built the white way system here with funds drawn from his own bank account and waited until such time as the city could reimburse him, which of course the citizens did gladly.
And on the same basis he himself shoved back the buildings, widened and rebuilt Tenth street, now the broadest street in the city.

He donated the pillars and archways and built the entry gates at both ends of the city on State Road
No. 24, or what, in the city limits, is known as Tenth street.

As it is now with Mr. Lamb—building in reasonable and sound anticipation of a sound crowd of tourists and investors here next season—he has always built ahead of the city's expansion. It is his conviction that the business man must not wait for expansion before he builds, but build as a Vanguard of growth.

During last year this developer built 20 modern homes and bungalows of the better type in St. Cloud, a number of which are located on Florida avenue. These have proved a splendid purpose in bringing in new residents and investors. Because of the pleasing tone the Lamb buildings lend to Florida avenue, motorists of ten ride the street to East Tohope-callica Lake on pleasure tours of the city, as nothing is so becoming and gratifying to healthy minds as a view of new homes and better homes constantly going up everywhere.

As Mr. Lamb feels about it, his motives in doing what he has done for the city of his choice, were to make it a better place for all to live in.
He maintains that the object has been achieved in one respect, but declares that the work of a builder and booster, and of civic and municipal bodies can never stop here, for he sees another city just ahead, materially larger and still more progressive than the St.
Cloud of this year of our Lord, 1927.
Hence he is adamant in his zeal to work for still higher standards to hold and support a city of a much greater population.

He is therefore practicing what he preaches—for he continues building and plans to keep the operation up indefinitely.

Mr. Lamb's office is located on the West side of New York avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh street in a building which he owns himself.
There you will find him ever watchful of the chance to render service to home-seekers or those who are desiring to make St. Cloud a still better place for its population.

As stated before, Mr. Lamb is still young. He is well seasoned in good business principles, and has a family for making and holding friends.

GENERAL SURVEY INDICATES BETTER BUSINESS AHEAD

appreciate their patronage, we will continue to grow and prosper here."

Speaking officially, the commissioner said that the city was already preparing for larger crowds next winter, and to that end had arranged for additional shuffle boards in the park, an excellent band under the leadership of F. W. Henke and other amusement facilities as conducive to increased tourist trade in any city.

Business depression was found in Kentucky, Indiana and in some parts of Illinois. Mr. Dawley said but of course, he explained, this did not affect those who come to Florida for the winters. The Florida tourist is the man or woman with a steady income, not disturbed by varying business changes.

The confidence which was destroyed more than a year and a half ago was not the confidence in Florida but in the men who judged Florida properly until the public would no longer believe their exaggerations or condone their method of operation—the same operations that unscrupulous operat-ers carry on anywhere the field is richest. For that reason they had to leave for other parts but Florida remains, with its manifold business opportunities unimpaired and its winter climate serving as the same old magnet that has called millions of dollars to the state from year to year.

In St. Cloud, as told elsewhere in today's Tribune, indications point to a splendid business this fall and winter. Already prospectors are peering through and not infrequently they stop to look over the city.

One hotel has become year-round filled up during the past two weeks, while other hotels are enjoying better business; new business enterprises are being established and a great many of the established merchants are increasing their stock and providing otherwise for a better demand for goods.

The real estate fraternity should take heart in the increasing number of inquiries reaching the city. While the majority of these are being received by the various realtors, the Chamber of Commerce inquiries have doubled recently. Like these coming into the office of the realtors, the Chamber of Commerce inquiries are for homes or farms.

At the office of the Atlantic Coast Railroad here W. R. Livingston, agent, stated that the company's business moving in and out of this section was better than it was in 1925, but explained that it had not kept pace with the lumber shipments of 1926.

However, Mr. Livingston said, the freight and express movements had shown a marked upward tendency during the past four weeks, and it is his belief that the approaching fall and winter season will find normal times fully restored.

St. Cloud merchants possessed with keen business foresight believe that a new era of good is close to their doors, and in order to stimulate it they are already increasing their advertising space which is bringing them excellent results.

On the theory that the time to advertise is when you have something to advertise, the merchants and business houses generally can show no stranger evidence of their faith in a prosperous future than to keep their stock rolling by creating a demand through the columns of their local newspaper.

GAME COMMISSIONER ON DEER HUNTING

Florida's open season for the hunting of buck deer under the present game law is August 1 to August 31, Friday and Saturdays only. Only bucks may be legally killed. A closed season of five years has been declared on doe deer.

It is necessary for a person to purchase a regular county or state hunting license before he can purchase the special deer license which is required before deer can be hunted in Florida.

The holder of a state game license who purchases a special deer license may hunt in all counties of the state except those which have been closed to deer hunting for the present, and these areas set aside for refuge or breeding grounds.

No person in the employ of the department, says the Commissioner, will be allowed to hunt during the August season. This, he added, includes the Commissioner himself.

The dry season during early spring months was favorable to the breeding of game, says Mr. Royall, and the increase resulting is gratifying.

CHURCH LAMENTS THE DEATH OF DR. COOKE

Expressing a feeling of the great loss the community has suffered through the recent death of Rev. Dr.
Silas A. Cooke, the officers and members of the First Presbyterian church have come on record with a fitting evolutionary statement, as that distinguished Christian scholar and co-worker worded in the following:

"Inasmuch as it has pleased Almighty God in his all-wise providence to remove from us our beloved brother and co-worker, the Rev. Dr. Silas
A. Cooke, and that in his passing our church and community has suffered a great loss:

"Be it resolved, that we the officers and members of the First Presbyterian Church of St. Cloud, Florida, be loyal mindful of the loss, which we have all sustained, do extend our deep and lasting sympathy to the family of our deceased brother. Adding also that through this our mutual sorrow rings a note of triumph that a valiant soldier of God and his country has thus bravely fought the good fight, has finished his course and kept the faith."

"Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be placed upon the records of the church, also that a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, and a copy to the local paper."

"By direction of the session of the church."

The masterly mind and high ideals of Dr. Cooke always impressed those about him, and an excerpt from poems he wrote, which was handed to the Tribune for publication, and which follows here, will be read with absorbing interest:

"WHAT IS YOUR LIFE?"

I looked beyond the mountains,
And I searched beyond the sea;
To find the wonder storehouse
Whence life comes forth to me.

I saw a dot in the heavens,
And it grew and grew and grew;
Until it sailed above me
Then again was a dot in the blue.

And I said it measures my voyage
Through time to eternity true;
For as the flight of the eagle
Appears and sinks in the blue,
So is my life.

Then I turned from the life that perisheth,
And searched for the throne in the sky
And by faith I saw the unchangeable,
Unseen by the mortal eye,
And then I found life.

For there is a life everlasting.

In its portals a door opens wide;
And my Savior stand in the doorway,
And bids me come in and abide.

And I saw the faces of loved ones,
As they stood by the Savior's side;
And my trials and sorrows faded,
As I entered the bliss portals wide.

But is there no value in sorrow?
And are earth's trials all vain?
No, earth is heaven's workshop,
Where souls are made over again.

And I'll find him, in whom life dwelleth.

And I'll humbly bow at his feet;
And with Him, in peace and quietness
I will walk the gold-paved street.

And there shall be joy unspeakable,
While the afflictions of earth shall pass;
And their memory through the ages
shall perish,
And God shall be all in all.

REV. SILAS A. COOKE

Rev. Silas A. Cooke, D. D., was born in Washington County Pennsylvania, October 20, 1842. He lived at his home on the farm until he answered the call to serve his country and in August, 1862 enlisted in Company K, 140 Pennsylvania volunteers. He was wounded at Spotsylvania and was later in the hospital with typhoid fever. He was discharged July 3, 1865. A weakened condition resulting from his wound decided him against the strenuous life of the farm and he taught school, later entering Washington and Jefferson College, from which he was graduated. He then took a theological course graduating from Western Theological Seminary, Pittsburg in 1873. He had five pastorate; Nelsonville, Ohio; Danbury, Ill.; Hebron, Neb.; Red Oak, Iowa; Early, Iowa; Andersonville, Florida and presided seven months as supply in St.
Cloud, to which place he moved in 1914 and lived until his death on Thursday, July 28.

On August 28, 1874 he married
Elizabeth M. Musser in Canonsburg, Penna. One son and three daughters survive: Clarence M., Mrs. Edith Colley, Mrs. Helene Anderson and Mrs.
Grace Liggett, also six grand-children and one brother, O. H. Cooke, of Orlando, Florida, and Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mrs. Cooke died November 30, 1921 and was laid to rest in Charter's cemetery at Pittsburgh, Pa., where the interment of Dr. Cooke will take place.

Dr. Cooke was a grandson of Captain James Cooke, of Lancaster county, Penna., an officer in the Revolutionary army in our war for independence. Three other ancestors of Dr.
Cooke also served in the Revolution.
A nephew, Mr. C. J. Farrar and wife attended the services which were held at the Presbyterian church on Saturday morning, July 30, conducted by the pastor, Dr. H. N. Campbell.

HOME FOLKS ENJOY PERKINS BIRTHDAY PARTY

A unique birthday party was enjoyed at the home of Hugh C. and Josephine Perkins on Fifteenth street and Dakota avenue, and the celebration will long be remembered by friends and relatives who attended. It was in memory of the veteran's 84th year, and he seemed to enjoy it to the utmost.

The guests were just the home folks, as it was termed, and among them were Ernest Perkins, Mary and son Marvin and Sgt. Redolf Jiraneck from the Hawaiian Islands. The party assembled early and commenced the celebration by giving Mr. Perkins a good whipping. But the veteran is so tough, it was stated, that he didn't suffer at the hands of his pretended adversaries.

Then Ernest Perkins took the satire party on a ride through St. Cloud, after which the bridge was crossed and a visit paid to interesting points in Kissimmee. Upon returning to St. Cloud a fine chicken dinner was served and participated in by all. It was a splendid dinner, served beautifully.

In the center of the dinner table was a large birthday cake with Mr. Hugh Perkins' name and age on it.

The afternoon was spent with singing by Mrs. Hugh C. Perkins and Marvin Perkins, with an organ accompaniment, and everybody agreed that Mr. Perkins' 84th birthday was the most enjoyable one he had yet lived to see. Each member of the party wished him the usual "many more" and the octogenarian was delighted with the sincere felicitations throughout. Mr. Perkins said the day couldn't have been better, unless it had been possible to have had present the other five children, who are in Nebraska.

At five o'clock consisting of cake, ice cream and punch, one of the cakes, a beautiful birthday present, was given by Mrs. Nichol's daughter. Among those present were Mrs. William Russell, Mr. and Mrs. James Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh C. Perkins, Mrs. Richard Coy, Mrs. Ray Magard, Bessie Guy and Mr. O. A. Stout.

The party departed feeling that they had well spent the afternoon.

PALM THEATRE BOOMING

The local picture house continues on a wave of newly found popularity.

The crowds during the past week have been perhaps double the size of any audience in evidence at the place for many months.

A noticeable change seems to permeate the entire atmosphere and that the change is for the better is told by results.

The amateur night, Tuesday of next week, promises some surprising new features.

The first prize this week was divided between Miss Ida Bell, Rudy Jardec and Paul Malone, the second award going to Ed Fidgett and assistant.

Full details next week.

The tapestries are attracting wide attention.

A 5 Kilowatt Kohler Electric Plant
—the Culmination of Seven Years of Progress

Since 1920 Kohler Co. has been building and perfecting electric plants—sturdy gasoline driven plants that furnish 110 volt current without the use of large storage batteries—plants that start automatically whenever a light is turned on.

Now a new Kohler Electric Plant is announced—the 5 K. W., new in its greater capacity, but based on principles perfected in the 800, 1500 and 2000 watt models. That this plant, like all Kohler Automatics, will meet the most exacting requirements to which it may be put, has now been proven in the Black Hills, where two 5 K. W. Kohler Plants light the Summer White House.

There is a Kohler Plant which will just meet your requirements. See us for additional information.

FLASHES OF FLORIDA FACTS

By MORRIS FOLBOM

A Well Managed State.—According to a financial report by the U. S. Bureau of Census it cost Florida less, with one exception, to operate and maintain its general departments of government than any other of the South Atlantic states. The total expenditure of 1926 in each operation, the report shows, was $10,151,000. Delaware operated on less than any of the other states, expending but $4,371,000.

Henry Ford.—July 30, 1863, was the birth day of Henry Ford, who is in the automobile business up in his native state of Michigan, and has made 35,000,000 cars. If you know his profit on a car you can figure out the money he has taken in. He has a winter home at Fort Myers, Florida, adjoining that of Thomas A. Edison, who too has made a stir in the world.

A Notable Saint.—The Roman Catholic church on July 30 observes the festival of St. Anne, who is the mother of the Virgin Mary and patron saint of Canada. Her shrine is in the beautiful Church of St. Anne, at Beaupre, 20 miles from Quebec, and is visited annually by thousands of pilgrims from Canada and the United States. Her bones were scattered among various churches in Europe, only a few bones are to be found in the Canadian church. A visit home of St. Anne is in the Church of St. Jean Baptiste, New York, and is occasionally exhibited to sick people who pray for cure.

Openings in Florida.—The opportunities offered energetic men in Florida are unequalled. I believe, anywhere else in America. The head of a family should not come empty-handed, but if he has intelligence, push and energy, he can make those qualities answer the place of capital. He can work out of doors every day, and his family can live in a tent, or temporary shack to start with, for the temperature is never severe. The question of getting along is for individual solution. The man who knows how and is willing can find something for his hands to do, but intelligent native must be back of the hands. No man of foresight needs to suffer nor should his family.

"Button, Button, Who's Got the Button?"—Fishermen, hunters and trappers of Florida henceforth must wear buttons when out in search of game. The buttons are in different colors, and of different design, one color with a fish on it, being issued to fishermen; another with a different color, and a quail on it, to hunters, and a third, with still another color, and a raccoon on it, going to trappers. The buttons are to be worn on the coat lapels, or sleeves, as outward evidence of the fact that the wearer is in possession of his license. However, it is pointed out by officials that the wearer must have his license with him, as game and fish wardens will not simply recognize buttons.

Our Cartwheel Dollars.—The "Blond dollar" is a name sometimes applied to the silver dollar of the United States the obverse of which began in 1878. During that year congress passed the act providing for such coinage. A bill was introduced in the house of representatives by Richard P. Bland, of Missouri, July 25, 1876, providing for the free and unlimited coinage of silver, which had been suspended since 1873. Mr. Bland's bill passed the house providing for free coinage, but was modified in the senate by the Allison amendment. As the bill became a law it provided that, instead of free coinage, the secretary of the treasury should purchase each month not less than $2,000,000 nor more than $4,000,000 worth of silver bullion, to be coined into silver dollars of 412½ grains each. President Hayes returned the bill with his veto February 24, 1878, but on the same day both house and senate passed the bill over his veto. This law was repealed in 1890 by the act of congress known as the Sherman law.

The Florida "stop, look, and listen" law passed by the session of the legislature cannot be carried out until the divisional engineers make their reports on the grade crossings of the state. Motorists travelling over Florida will remember that many of the railway grade crossings are in such shape that the cars are almost compelled to come to a stop now in order to make the grade.

Florida Leads 25 States For Road Building

BUILT 349 MILES LAST YEAR In U. S. TOTAL of 19,492

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Florida in 1926 led 25 states of the union in new surfacing and reconstruction of state road systems, according to statistics just released by the bureau of public road, United States department of agriculture.

The figures, it was stated, were based upon state reports sent to the bureau during the past year.

Built 349.5 Miles.—Florida's new surfacing and reconstructing for the year totaled 349.5 miles. The total for the United States was 19,492.

In existing surfaced mileage at the end of 1926, Florida led 23 states, with a mileage of 27,353, and in the total mileage of state systems, Florida stood 25 with 5654.

The total mileage in state systems last year was 287,928.2 and the existing surfaced mileage at the end of the year was 27,353.

More than 13,000 miles of earth roads included in the state highway systems were surfaced by the several highway departments, the report states, of the 19,492 miles surfaced last year, 13,664 miles was laid over former earth roads, and 5828 represented a rebuilding of old surfaces.

Mileage Increases.—The total mileage of surfaced roads in the state highway systems increased 18,305 miles during the year, the report says. Of the increase, 4541 miles represented no actual work by the states, but consisted merely of mileage transferred from county to state jurisdiction, statistical changes resulting from re-surveys, and so forth.

The figures made public referred to increases in surfaced mileage on the state highway systems only and did not include surfacing laid by the counties, or other local governments. They do include, however, it was stated, all work done with federal aid.

Of the 287,928.2 miles included in the state systems of the country, 28,496 miles were graded and drained according to engineering standards. The state systems are now about 66 percent initially improved, says the report.

DEMPESEY WILL QUIT RING AFTER TUNNEY ROUT, HE DECLARES

Atlanta, Ga.—Win or lose the Tunney bout, Jack Dempsey will hang up his gloves thereafter unless the heavyweight field is thick enough with prospects to keep him busy fighting, the former king of the heavyweight declared as he passed through Atlanta on his triumphant transcontinental swing.

"If I win back the crown, I'll get out of the game forever rather than wait two or three years before meeting a worthy contender," he found time to say amid the tumultuous welcome he received at the hands of hundreds who met him, including Governor L. G. Hardman, of Georgia.

GOVERNMENT GETS A BIG INCOME FROM THE SOUTH

A current issue of the Manufacturers Record says that since 1924 the income of the United States government has been steadily mounting and the internal revenue department figures for the fiscal year just closed show that the collections in the south were greatly in excess of 1926 receipts, while the rest of the country outside of the south paid less into the Treasury.

For the fiscal year 1927, Federal tax collections, including income tax tobacco and other miscellaneous taxes, amounted to $2,865,695,000, compared with $2,835,906,000 in 1926 and $2,584,140,000 in 1925.

Income tax collections for the fiscal year just closed amounted to $2,210,811,000, compared with $1,974,104,000 in 1926 and $1,751,650,000 in 1925. While this was an increase in income tax receipts compared with 1926 of $245,727,000, the total Federal tax receipts increased by only $29,695,000.

From the Southern States alone the Federal Government collected during the fiscal year 1927 $698,284,000, of which $349,852,000 was from income income taxes. This was an increase compared with 1926 of $54,928,000 in total Federal tax receipts, $45,108,000 of which was from income tax collections in the south. Of striking significance is the fact that while the south paid nearly $32,000,000 more into the Federal Treasury in total taxes in 1927 than in 1926, Federal tax collections in the rest of the country outside of the south during this period were approximately $22,000,000 less. North Carolina led the south with a

CHICAGO AGREED ON AS SITE, IS THE CLAIM

TUNNEY-DEMPESEY FIGHT DETAILS COMPLETED

DETROIT.—All details for holding the heavyweight championship contest between Gene Tunney, titleholder and Jack Dempsey, have been agreed upon with the exception of the actual date of the contest, George E. Getz, millionaire sportsman and real operator, declared on his arrival here following a conference with Tex Rickard.

Getz, who is chairman of the newly created Chicago citizens committee which is made up of Chicago business men organized to co-operate in boosting Chicago, said the date had been tentatively set for September 23, subject to change.

Getz indicated he will be nominally designated as the promoter because of the requirement of the Illinois boxing law which provides that promotion of such affairs be in the hands of Illinois residents. His only interest in the affair, however, he indicated, is the advertising Chicago will obtain.

"BIRDS OF A FEATHER"

That birds of a feather will flock together has been literally proven, according to a front page dispatch to the New York World. The dispatch says Arthur B. Weeks, of Meriden, Conn., owner of a bungalow at Lake Pocotopung set a hen on eight quail eggs. All hatched. The quail which laid the eggs had been hovering near during the incubation process and soon after the baby quails were out the real mother bird lured them from the brooding hen.

total payment to the Federal Government of $205,648,000, as compared with a combined total for all of the New England States of $181,346,000 and a combined total for the Pacific Coast States of $169,231,000.

Florida, despite all the criticisms that have been made against that State, paid in $44,484,000, which was $8,000,000 more than Indiana, $32,000,000 more than Iowa, $24,000,000 more than Kansas, $16,000,000 more than Minnesota, seven times as much as Nebraska, more than twice times as much as New Hampshire, more than three times as much as Rhode Island and nearly $4,000,000 more than Wisconsin.

FLORIDA'S NEW STATE PRISON READY BY THIS FALL

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 7.—Florida's new state prison, now being built at Raiford, will probably be ready for occupancy some time in the fall, according to Charles W. Hunter, state supervisor of industries.

The new prison building, being built wholly by convict labor, will cost between $300,000 and $400,000 and will be one of the most up to date in the country. It is being modeled after the famous Kilby prison of Alabama, a penitentiary known over the country for its substantial construction.

Concrete for the first floor and all cell blocks has been poured. Mr. Hunter said, and forms are being erected for the second floor. The structure will be a three story one, and will have a capacity of 2,700. It will consist of a bakery, kitchen, dining room, and assembly hall, warden's office, the superintendent's office and other necessary official quarters.

That the new prison building will be needed in Florida is indicated by the continued heavy influx of prisoners, Mr. Hunter said. The commitments have averaged around 1,100 convicts a year, but from the large number sent to prison during the first half of 1927, the current year's total in commitments will top any previous record, he stated.

The legislature of 1925, in special session here, made the new penitentiary possible by appropriating $300,000 for its erection. A similar amount was appropriated for a new state department building here. The latter is now nearing completion.

During the past 100 years the population of the world has increased from less than 1,000,000,000 to about 1,700,000,000.

THE LEADING CHARACTERS
EDMON FORBES, a young resident of Scottsdale, goes on a little joy ride with another fellow. Some liquor is consumed. They are stopped suddenly by the sight of a horse truck driven by SCOUTS LIBREY, a worthless character, who has smashed his machine into another car, killing its lone occupant, a woman. Forbes' companion and Librey quit the scene hurriedly, leaving the former alone to face a constable who reasons that Eddie, with the scent of whiskey about him, must be connected in some way with the accident. Accordingly, Forbes is arrested.

Out on bail, Eddie keeps from his wife the name of the person he was with. Forbes does this to shield the younger fellow who would be ruined if the truth were learned. Instead Eddie bears the brunt of the circumstantial evidence and at his trial is declared guilty and sentenced to prison for a long term of years. At the jail one of the authorities approaches and introduces himself.

CHAPTER V
"I'm Warden Courtney," announced the newcomer. "You're to go up to Lansing right away. The governor wants to see you."

Eddie looked at him unconprehendingly. "The governor?" he stammered. "Me—why?"

The warden smiled. "He'll tell you when you get there. If you hurry you can catch the next interurban limited. There's one due in ten minutes."

"But—" Eddie looked about uncertainly.

"No officer; you go alone." Still calling the warden shock hands with him, "Good luck." The handclasp impelled Eddie toward the door.

"You know where the station is? All right, better step lively."

He caught the car. He did not know what to think. In fact, the waves of emotion which had passed over him made clear thinking impossible. He dared not hope; but the wheels clicked endlessly: "The governor, the governor—" and it seemed a song of hope.

When he reached Lansing he found that Governor Albright was expecting him. When he gave his name to the attendant at once into the private office. "Well, Forbes," grunted the governor, as they shook hands, "how many kinds of a fool have you been making of yourself?"

He was a big man whose age was hard to estimate and whose hair was of a certain shade which defied the coming of gray. Eddie started at the beginning and told him the whole story, withholding only the name of his companion.

"So you took a chance on prison to protect this fellow who was with you?" queried the governor, when he had finished.

Eddie nodded. "But I don't know what I would have done if," he confessed frankly, "if I'd thought they'd convict. It didn't seem possible they could do that on the evidence."

"Anyway, you did," returned the governor. "The world calls you a hump for that. But somehow, my boy, I'm for you. There's too much thinking of yourself and too little thinking of the other fellow in the world today."

"I suppose you are surprised at my seeing for you. Fact is Eddie, we should know each other. Did you ever hear that your father was one of my best friends 40 years ago?"

"He mentioned you sometimes before he died, sir."

"Well, I brought you here on his account. When we were both youngsters we worked in the lumber woods together. It was he who gave me my start. He came into a little money about the time I had a chance to buy a block of pine. He let me have it. In a couple of years I cleaned up a mighty comfortable stake. There was no stopping me after that."

"Of course I said him back long ago. But I've always had a warm spot in my heart for Joe Forbes. If it hadn't been for him, the chances are about fifty to one I'd never been governor of Michigan."

"That's why I sent for you, Eddie. I feel that I owe his son something. I kept an eye on your case. I couldn't interfere until you'd had your trial. When I heard you'd been convicted I telephoned the warden to send you down. Boy, I've pardoned you."

"Pardoned me—pardoned?" gulped Eddie.

"Yes, I read the evidence pretty closely. I came to the conclusion you were telling the truth. I was far enough away from Scottsdale not to be blinded by prejudice and local issues. You're a free man."

Eddie sat motionless, bereft of the power of speech. "Of course the long hair will run about my turning you loose," went on the governor, with a good-natured smile. "But this through with this term, I should worry what they say, when my conscience tells me I've done right. Now Eddie—"

"Yes, sir."

"There's one thing I want you to promise me. You know, your father was a fine man and a clever man. He would have gone a long ways if it hadn't been for—"

"I know, governor, liquor."

"That's right, boy. It looks as though you've started the same way. There's nothing in it; never has been, and now less than ever. I wish you'd promise me, Eddie—not to quit drinking, because that may be beyond your strength, but to try to quit drinking."

"Oh, governor, I promise to quit now, forever," breathed Eddie.

"The governor clasped him on the shoulder. "All right, lad; that's fine. You see, it sort of puts us in the hole and makes the long hair right if you fall down on me. I'd like to turn the laugh against them. Now run along to that little wife of yours."

In the train ride from the capital to Scottsdale Eddie came as near to true happiness as at any time in his life. The fate which he had faced and so narrowly escaped had toned down the riotousness of his joy. The tornado of emotion which had carried him breathlessly to the depths of misery, through the uncertainty of the journey to the governor's office and through most of the interview that followed, had left him somewhat exhausted.

So he was in a condition of delightful languor, swayed in the ineffable thought that he was a free man—free to start over again, free to take up life again with Patsy Jane. Prison doors did not open blackly behind him. They had closed, closed forever.

"That's as near as I want to get," he said to himself, with a shudder. "That's what booze did for me. I'll never take another drink!" But even as he reiterated the pledge anxiously he was conscious of a lack, of a void at his nerve centers which a good stiff drink would plug up effectively.

CHAPTER VI
A Change of Scene

Scottsdale hummed like a swarm of angry bees over the governor's pardon. The community had never been for Albright. In all his campaigns it had voted for his opponents, professing church-goers who singled out the liquor law in their speeches as the one they would enforce most rigorously. This applied to Scottsdale which, furthermore, disapproved of Richard Albright because he was a "liberal."

Judge Persons issued a public statement in which he declared that the governor's action was a "gross abuse of power," and made the Forbes case a "travesty of justice."

To Eddie and his wife the town had become impossible. He could have stayed on, found work of some kind, and forced it to revise its estimate. But the game was not worth the candle. He knew something of the inert vindictiveness toward L. erring of which small communities are capable. It might be years before he could fight back to grudging position again. These would be years of loneliness and ostracism.

"It isn't with it, Eddie," agreed Patsy Jane, soberly, when the first clouded the future. "Any boy that was born here and tries to be somebody is under a handicap. They can't admit he can possibly be as good as someone who comes from away. No; we'll go. But where?"

"I've thought of that," replied Eddie eagerly. "Don't you remember I had some cotton pine lands near Long Portage? Let's go on there. The land isn't much good, I suppose. But there's a house on the place; anyway there was three years ago when I went fishing on Portage creek."

"It's wonderful up there in the summer. We can make the land support us. If you'd care to go so far from civilization and rough it, Patsy Jane," he concluded, wistfully.

"Why, of course I would, Eddie," she returned promptly. "I'd love it! If the land won't support us, why there are opportunities there just the same as there are here. It's that or a big city. And I hate big cities."

"So do I," he rejoined, his face clearing magically. "I'm crazy to give the wilderness a trial. We'll buy a second hand bus and some camping stuff and start."

It was nearly noon of the third day when surmounting a considerable ridge they saw the roof of the log cabin. Patsy Jane greeted it with a triumphant chirp. The journey had been a pleasant one. They had left behind the prosperous section of the state with its paved road, with the first day. Concrete had been replaced by gravel, which in turn yielded to dirt turnpikes.

These made way for sandy tracks which wiggled with apparent aimlessness through the jackpine country. Spring was appreciably more tardy as they penetrated northward. The nights were chill but the days were fine and sunshiny.

The Forbes hundred and sixty acres were twelve miles east of the village of Long Portage. They had stopped in the woods town for provisions and other supplies. It boasted a railroad division headquarters, a sawmill, and little else.

The log house, much to Eddie's surprise, and satisfaction, was found to be in fairly good condition. The roof was whole. Apparently, deer hunters had used the place the previous autumn as a camp. There was a rusty but serviceable stove which he did not recall as having been there previously, in the kitchen.

The kitchen was a bento adjoining the main building. The bigger structure was divided into a combination living room and dining room, and a bedroom considerably smaller. The living room had chairs and a table, of a sort, and there were benches nailed to the log walls on two sides.

"Why, we can stay here tonight, Pat," he announced gleefully. "It won't be much of a job to clean up. Wonder if the pump's all right?"

A few strokes of the handle of the iron "pitcher" pump near the back door brought up an abundance of clear, cold water. "We're sitting pretty," he declared. "Let's have lunch. I'm crazy to tear in and make this place into something."

In mid-afternoon, as they were scrubbing furniture happily, they had a visitor. He had walked to the cabin over the rolling jackpine wastes. "Good day to you," he began. "I saw the smoke from your chimney. My name is Daniel Sealman. My land adjoins part of your quarter-section on the west."

"How do you do?" greeted Eddie, taking the proffered hand. "I am Eddie Forbes. This is my wife."

Sealman, somehow, the name fitted him admirably, Eddie thought. He was as sleek as a seal which had just emerged from the water. He had smooth brown hair, worn long, but kept in excellent order. He had a full though sloping forehead, and a large, high-bridged nose. The lower part of his face was covered by a beard several shades lighter than the hair. It was also sleek and well kept. The man was large, inclined to stoutness, and with an air of being above the rough frontier clothing which he wore.

"Here for summer outing, I suppose?" persuaded Sealman, as he looked about with large, shrewd blue eyes.

"Here for good," returned Eddie, smiling frankly. "I own this place, you know. We thought we'd give the north a trial."

Sealman shot him a quick glance. "I had heard that people named Forbes owned it," he said slowly. "But I thought you'd abandoned it. The taxes—"

"By Jove, that's so!" interrupted Eddie, frowning thoughtfully. "I've neglected the taxes for some time. I must go down town tomorrow and see about them."

"You intend to farm, Mr. Forbes?"

"To tell the truth, I don't know," returned Eddie. "We haven't had time to look around and decide. I don't suppose much of this land is good. I haven't any implements or horses—"

Sealman nodded agreement. "The land isn't much good. It goes in streaks up here in the jackpine country. There's an occasional belt of good land and then a belt of white sand that won't raise rag-weed. Yours, except along Portage, is mostly sand. It's all right to spend a vacation on, though pretty lonesome, even in summer. I'm afraid you'll be pulling up stakes again pretty soon."

Eddie had a good, sizable jaw. He thrust it forward unconsciously as he answered: "Oh, no, we won't. We've decided to locate in the northern part of the state. We haven't seen much of our land, but we like what we've seen. I don't think it's lonesome here—"

He looked doubtfully at Patsy Jane.

"Neither do I," she supplemented, spiritedly. "I want to stay here. I love it. If the farm won't support us, my husband can find something to do. I'm sure. We don't need much."

Sealman considered without speaking for a time. He spoke slowly: "Well, if that's the way you feel about it, I might be able to use you, Forbes. I'm raising a good deal of alfalfa lately. They've taken to feeding sheep and cattle on these barrens. Most of my land's under cultivation. I need a hand—" he stopped. "I tell you come over after you've seen about your taxes and made up your mind fully whether you're going to stay."

SUNDAY EVENING SERVICE

AUGUST 7, 1927

The union service on Sunday evening, August 7, at eight o'clock, will be in charge of a committee appointed by the Ministerial Association of St. Cloud to arrange for this service.

The committee includes the following announcement:
The Saults Harmonizers, a colored male quartette from Orlando, will be the special singers. They will give several of their spirituals in connection with the other music.

This quartette are gospel singers, and have sung on several occasions for white congregations in the city of Orlando, and never fail to draw a full house where they are billed to appear. The committee feels they are fortunate in securing these singers.

The speaker of the evening will be Mr. Frederick L. Treat, and he certainly bears out his name, he is a real treat on the platform. He is the field executive of the boy scouts of Florida, a young man who has thrown his life into the work of making real citizens of the coming men of our country.

for any group, but is for all the people of St. Cloud. In honor of the speaker the boy scouts will be in uniform and will act as ushers.

On account of the auditorium there the meeting will be held in the Methodist church, and the south division of the seats will be reserved for all the young people of the city.

THEODORE S. LYON DIES

The body will be sent to Chattanooga, Tennessee, for burial in the National Cemetery.

NEW HATCHERY SOON TO BE STARTED IN KISSIMMEE

Within the next thirty days—as soon as the railroads can deliver it—A. E. Thomas announces that he will have a Buckeye Mammoth Incubator in operation at his residence at North Main street in Kissimmee. It will be equipped to operate with both electricity and oil burner, and will have a moisture thermometer and an electric temperature alarm. With this addition to his present equipment, the new hatchery will have a capacity of twenty-five hundred eggs every week, or one case of eggs daily. The egg supply is happily solved by the co-operation of several owners of pure bred flocks of Rhode Island Reds, White Wyandottes, Barred Rocks and White Leghorns, which will be the principal varieties handled. The first delivery of newly hatched chicks will be made about October 1st.

The whole poultry industry has changed in the past few years. Old fashioned methods of hatching chickens are too slow. Hatching a few chickens at a time costs too much and takes too much time and work. And the modern hatchery has proved that it can produce chicks cheaper and can produce better chicks, than the average poultry keeper on his own place.

Mr. Thomas extends an invitation to all persons interested in poultry to come and inspect the new incubator when it has been received and is ready for operation.

WATER-METERS

There are many good reasons for the use of water-meters. One of the most important is that selling water by measurement is the only logical and business-like way. This method is now used by all private utility corporations and should be likewise used by all municipal utility departments. It is the only method that does not result in gross inequalities and discriminations against some of the consumers in favor of others.

Another reason is that the installation of water-meters is the only practical method yet devised for restricting excessive waste.

The use of meters is now becoming much more general, and in most cities today the large consumers, at least, are now metered. In St. Louis, any connection other than one 1/2-inch tap requires a meter. The present consumption per capita is 145 gallons. Under a fully metered system it would probably be 100 gallons per capita.

There are those who would not hesitate to estimate that the loss or waste of water due to small unmetered consumers averages 50 to 60 per cent of the total amount of leakage. The general use of meters should be the watchword of the day in a modern water-works system.

Usually there is a great deal of opposition raised to the introduction of meters, but in most cases it has been found that after they have been installed the good results which are immediately obtained cause them to be greatly favored by a community.

The general installation of meters in cities from 5000 population up has in recent years greatly reduced the per capita consumption. In these cities, thereby enabling a tremendous saving to be made in the cost of pumping, extension to the distribution system, and chemical treatment of the water.

Attired in a military jacket and waving a white baton, a woman recently stepped in the center of a crowded Paris boulevard, ordering all vehicles to stop immediately. Attracted by the unusual traffic jam, police hurried to the rescue. The self-appointed cop calmly explained, "I read in the papers that women soon will be taken on the police force and I thought I would get some practice."

The demand for ostrich feathers has declined to the point where they are being used for dusters.

A COLORED MAN IS PRAISED FOR WORK

JACKSONVILLE, July 15.—George Washington Green is making history in Clermont, says the Florida State Chamber of Commerce. Green is black, but his footprints are leaving a trail so wide even the common garden variety of citizen can see it; it doesn't require trained vision of a Sherlock Holmes.

Green, appropriately enough, is making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, and is the main cog in a city beautification machine invented by the Clermont Chamber of Commerce, which seems well worth adopting from Pensacola in Key West.

The Clermont Chamber has a beautification committee of which F. Gentle is chairman. Like many such committees, its heart was in the right place, but its hands were tied; it was out on a limb for funds. Someone suggested that it try on a voluntary basis the old time honored trick of drafting citizens for public work for one day or extract from each a sum sufficient to employ a substitute to do his bit. The committee adopted the alternative feature of the custom and called for volunteers on the basis of $3 per day. It harvested a few $3 contributions.

Green now is the official beautifier. He is the machine which does the work and Mr. Gentle's committee is supplying the oil in the form of individual $3 contributions from citizens for one day's labor, which keeps the apparatus in motion. It also outlines each job for Green to perform. Both Green and the beautification committee have a perfect batting average, and Clermont, already admitted to be one of the most attractive cities in Florida, is growing more beautiful.
